The Journal of Indian Ocean Studies (JIEWS) is a peer-reviewed, open-access avenue for original articles in the social sciences and related disciplines that contribute to an understanding of the Indian Ocean World (IOW) and its constituent parts, from early times to the present day. We particularly welcome well-informed articles that broach issues of human-environment interaction, servile labour, gender roles and relations, and those which challenge conventional temporal (e.g. “early modern”) and “area studies” paradigms. Proposals for book reviews will also be considered.

Papers may be submitted in English or French. Only full and previously unpublished papers (not abstracts) will be considered. Potential articles should be original, and a maximum of 8,000 to 10,000 words, including footnotes. They should be in 12 pt Times Roman script, with double line-spacing throughout. Footnotes should be reserved for bibliographical references. A 200 word abstract, and the author’s name, institutional affiliation, and email address should accompany the article which should be sent to the editors as an email attachment (in doc format, not pdf) at jiows@mcgill.ca. Authors are advised to adhere to the JIEWS style guide available here: <http://jiows.mcgill.ca/about/submissions#authorGuidelines>
